

Take care of your translators and interpreters!

When offering language support in crisis situations, take care of your professional and volunteer translators and interpreters in the same way as other aid workers.

Adequate working conditions and a place to rest, eat & recover

Adequate remuneration for translation and interpreting services

Psychological support pre-and post-assignment, particularly if interpreting distressing information

Training
on how to work crisis situations

Watch out!

Should your employee with language skills always be expected to translate or interpret?

Understand language support needs

Work with professional language service providers

Budget for professional language support

Incorporate language support in your crisis management plans
